Dick Van Dyke, a huge star and Emmy Award winner who enjoyed a long career in film and television, died Monday of natural causes, according to The Hollywood Reporter. He was 95. Van Dyke died at his Los Angeles home, The Hollywood Reporter said. In his 60-plus years in Hollywood, Van Dyke appeared in at least 50 films and 30 television shows, according to the Hollywood Reporter. He played the role of newsman Ed Norton in "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" and featured roles in films including "Mary Poppins," "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" and "Revenge of the Nerds." On TV, he was a 15-season player on the "CBS/Hallmark" series "Dorothy and Lizzie" (1979-1984) with Patricia Neal, whose career spanned five decades. "Dick was such a special, kind, giving person who cared about others as much as he did himself," said the show's executive producer Pamela Roylance. "He was very good to Patricia, always leaving her treats, or having her home while he filmed in California, and would drive to her home in Connecticut to help her out." "He was also supportive of younger actors and aspiring actresses, not only in the comedy world, but also in dramatic and musical theatre. He understood and appreciated the passion that went into all forms of the arts," Roylance said. In 2016, Van Dyke earned a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame for his work in television. He received that honor on July 19, less than one month before his 95th birthday. That day at the ceremony, Van Dyke told the audience that he was sometimes self-conscious about his age. "I don't feel
